SYNOPSIS

The most common business drivers currently influencing the supply chain and logistics operations include increasing complexity, financial/cost pressure, speed and quality expectations as well as information technology and increasing use of technology.

Success in the Transportation & Logistics sector relies almost exclusively on efficient processes, keeping asset utilization and productivity high and costs low. If these become the predominant and passionate focus of the provider, everything else follows. Customers are happy and loyal and profits are sustainable.

In this course, we explore how to build robust cost management to improve efficiency and profitability.
